Dear Alex and Fred:

Enclosed herewith is a copy of a memorandum which was recently circulated to National Counsel by Jones, Day. It attempts to address a number of the major litigation strategy issues which we must face, and was designed as a partial supplement and response to the Silfen memorandum.

Both the Silfen and Jones, Day memoranda were discussed at the meeting of National Counsel which took place earlier this week, and I anticipate that we will have similar sessions in the future, as our thinking on these issues crystallizes.

I think that the Jones, Day memorandum makes very interesting and provocative reading. There are some aspects of it with which I do not agree, but like the Silfen memorandum, it serves a very useful purpose in stimulating everyone's thinking.

With warm regards.

Sincerely yours,

Murray H. Bring
